PACKERS 45 queenie's 7

A Significant Victory... that was how Mike McCarthy characterized the Packers shellacking of the Viqueens Monday night at Lambeau Field. And he was exactly right. That's what I've noticed about Mike, he's careful with his words. It's obvious he enjoys what he's doing, and he enjoys winning, but he's careful with what he says. He stated when he became Head Coach that he and the team would exemplify the blue collar attitude of the citizens of Green Bay and Wisconsin. They do, they go about their business, they enjoy themselves, and then they turn back to the task at hand. In February, they will celebrate!

Clay Matthews has been in a slump recently just 3 sacks this season prior to Monday's game for last season's sack master and Defensive Player of the Year runner-up. He came through this game though, bracketing another defensive great's performance, Charles Woodson. The rest of the defense was apparently drinking from the same cooler of Gatorade, because they played a great game!

"We're mad," Woodson said. "We're mad about the way we've been performing. Not holding up our end of the bargain. The way our offense has been playing and carrying this team, we want to be a part of that too. We don't want it to just be one-sided." And it wasn't.

So you want to become an NFL owner..

What would it take to become an NFL owner? A few Billion dollars in your pocket would help, but you also need an arrogant attitude and be heartless as you fire the coaches and cast off some of your star players. You must alienate your players and fans, standing on the sideline giving your opinion on how the game should be called. You may also start talk of moving the team in the hopes that the current city you are in will cough up the money for a new stadium.

That may work for 31 of the NFL teams but one is different... The Packers. For the third time in their history, they will be offering a chance with a stock purchase to buy into the team, to be part owners so to speak.

So here's how it works. You give the Packers about $250 (actual price is yet to be determined) for each share you

Fans

Linda is taking a week off. Look for Focus on the Fans next week. In the mean time, watch for her this Sunday as she surveys the crowd looking for the next interesting Packer Fans. Everyone has a story, so be prepared.

Greenville Packer Backers in the Earles, #102 Tim Ware & #117 Nick (the elder) Papala won on the fifty cent board. The club was also a winner for one quarter so somebody missed a chance to win.

At least a dozen door prizes were handed out to the 65 or so fans at The Corner pocket on Monday night. Winners of some of the prizes were: #240 P J Planz, who won a lighter, #197 Bob Tackett got a car Magnet as did #221, Barbara Gambrell, #182 Rick Geil took the winter gloves, #132 Sharon Schulz is happy with her socks, #143 Rex Weinbender is thrilled with his landyard and #298 Fran Scoville was the winner of a Packer watch.

The winner of the gas grill from The Corner Pocket was #303 (Little) Nicholas Papala, but I think Big Nick will be doing the cooking for a while.

The winner of the Trivia contest was #227 Ben Peters. He were not the first name drawn, the first left at half-time, but since you have to be present to win, they lost. Winners on the dollar pool were "Charles", Colleen Beavers #261, #106 John Wieloch & #221, Barbara Gambrell, while #228 Melissa

At Sunday's game, we'd like to see a big crowd because, weather permitting, we are planning on taking a group shot outside the bar at half-time. This picture will be on our facebook page and maybe a few other places to help promote the club and the great time we have during the game. GO! PACK! GO! (JW)

Buck an ear

"He's a nasty dawg. He just loves playing football. That's a compliment when you're talking about a quarterback.

He's gutting you and he has that smirk on his face..." - Bucs coach Raheem Morris on Green Bay QB Aaron Rodgers.

Some of you may remember a time when this was a twice a year deal, the Pack and the Bucs; battle of the "Bays" they use to call it. Back in the days when the name Warren Sapp just sent you into shivers. Not so much any more. This has become a bi-annual affair now, but what is funny is since they left for the NFC south, their record against us is much improved, in fact, they have won the last 4 out of five times they've met and McCarthy has yet to beat Tampa Bay. The last time they met was in Tampa on 11/9/09 in a game we went down to see and ended up being one of the worst Packer games I can remember. That was the game that we not only lost Cullen Jenkins for the year, but saw Rodgers AND Flynn get hurt and knocked out of the game as well.

That is all history as they say. This is a new Pack and a new Tampa. In case you aren't familiar with the Bucs, here's a run down of their leaders: Josh Freeman QB 9 TD's & 13 Ints, his biggest stat is only 14 sacks; Lagarrette Blount RB 4.3 YD/carry and 434 total (both less then Starks numbers); receivers Mike Williams (39 for 406) and Kellen Winslow (38 for 344); Sean Jones with a team leading 46 tackles; Adrian Clayborn with 3 sacks and Ronde Barber with 2 Ints. Out of that list, I bet the only name you know is Freeman, maybe, Winslow and Barber. They have lost 5 games this year, but don't let that fool you. They have fallen victim to Detroit, San Fran, Chicago, New Orleans and Houston; many which they were in the game until the end.

You combine their recent record against us and their loosing to only top ranked teams and we cannot afford to look past this game. 1-0 as Air-Ron says and this is a week they better that heed his words. Funny thing, Jon Gruden had serious thoughts of drafting Air-Ron, even flying cross country and bringing in Jerry Rice as a throwing target for his tryout but ended up drafting Cadillac Williams instead. Thank you Jon! Come Sunday, the Pack will reign again in the battle of the "Bays". Gruden's decision will come back and haunt the Bucs now and for many bi-annual years to come. Charles Woodson is having fun talking about an undefeated season, not so much because he thinks it's important, but because you gotta have fun with it while it's around. That's what the Pack need to do, have fun with it. They've earned it, but they also know they have to earn it again. That desire to be back there again will be greater then the Bucs desire to get there once, because unlike you and I, the Bucs cannot Bleed Green my Friends. (JW)

Still Suck

Charles and the D put on a show, sometimes you can go to the bathroom while the other team has the ball, but the way the defense was flying all over the place you never knew what you were going to miss. One of the biggest plays for me was when Charles had an unprotected blitz on Ponder. Ponder handed off to Peterson who is "one of the most violent runners in the NFL"(WTH does that even mean?), Charles stopped him cold and threw him for a loss of eight yards. Very cool!

Aaron Rodgers put in another day at the office. 4 Touchdowns, 250 yards, 21 yards rushing yardage, ya know, brilliant. 140.3 passer rating.

The only negative for the night came from Randall Cobb our punt returner. He takes the first one 80 yards to the house to put us up 7-0. Great, we don't get to see Aaron for 5 more minutes. Then he muffs one, and give them the short field for their lone score of the game. Then the next punt he gets, he rips it for 55 yards. He did that last time he muffed a punt; ripped off huge yards the next time. Mike McCarthy mentioned this specifically in his press conference. "He has three fumbles in nine games and that's not cutting it." Shawn Slocum, special teams coach has vowed to stop it. "He's a dynamic player. He has a great will to compete," Slocum said. "The two muffed punts and the turnover on the kickoff, we're going to remove that from his game. He lost sight of one of the core fundamentals, which is make sure the ball is caught before you take off." You can tell by watching it that that is what's happening. I think we'll get it straightened out quickly.

Even Matt Flynn got in on the action. It was supposed to be just a hand-off drill with 10 minutes left in the game to eat up the clock and give him some real-time experience. They failed to inform Matt of that. He thought it was still a game. He had a passer rating of 118.8 (seriously??) 2 passes for 38 yards, and

Injury Update

Now a whole lot of change this week. One notable is Ryan Grant (cut on Knee) but is expected to be ready come Sunday.

Doubtful (2): Mike Neal, & Chad Clifton.

Probable (5): Ryan Grant, Josh Sitton, Clay Matthews, Frank Zombo & Morgan Burnett

then he rushed it in for a touchdown. The only question now is, can we keep this up. I think yes, Dom Capers has showed the defense what they are capable of when they play with a sense of urgency and it should carry over as we get into the stretch going into the later part of the season. Tampa, you're on notice!! (Ken Hill) purchase. Be warned that you are limited to only 20,000 shares. You can't sell them, but you can pass them onto family members. There is not dividend paid. The money raised will go towards the 13 million dollar expansion of 6600 open air, blue collar seats in the south end zone. The official date for sales has yet to be determined, so keep one ear open and get your check book ready. Christmas is just around the corner. What better way to say I love you then to buy me a share or two in the Packers, the greatest team ever. Oh, and get one for you're sweetie too.
